STEAMER HOSPITAL ON THE BANKS.

The French government have evinced a particular interest in their fleet of cod fishermen engaged in Newfoundland waters, by the equipment of a hospital ship, the Saint Pierre, a sailing vessel, which is under the auspices of the Societe des Euvres de Mer. Dr. Bonnafy in his recent report made the announcement that the authorities of the association are to replace the present sailing vessel by a steamer which is to be constructed with special fittings for medical and surgical work among the French ships engaged in the codfishery industry. This will give great facilities for getting around among the vessels of the fleet and add much to the efficiency of the work of affording medical aid to the fishermen.

A report of the doings of the St. Pierre, which follows, will be interesting to the TIMES readers. It will be noticed that in addition to the offering of medical aid post office duties were also conducted with much success.

The St. Pierre left Malo last April in charge of Dr. Bomain of the French naval service and although a sailing vessel, was nevertheless able within the space of six months to complete five cruises, embracing the whole of the fishing grounds.

"In the course of these continuous peregrinations, during weather that sometimes was calm, but more often "dirty," communication was established with 301 fishing boats, when all slight cases of sickness or injury among the crews were duly attended to on board their own craft, the more serious cases, 83 in number, being transhipped into the Saint Pierre for treatment.

"In addition to affording medical aid the officials of the hospital ship also undertook post office duties, delivering 7261 letters among the fishers and receiving 4020 in return for conveyance to families and friends at home.

"Ten sailors adrift in four dories were picked up and rescued by the Saint Pierre during her cruises. This remarkable fact exhibits in a very somber light the difficulties and dangers of the life led by the codfishers."

FRESH FISH.Canada Recognizing the Value of This Trade.*Legislative Committee Makes an Interesting Report.

The report of the special legislative committee to investigate the condition of the Canadian fisheries with a view to improve the facilities for the transportation of fresh fish was presented to the House of Assembly on Tuesday by Mr. J. H. Sinclair.

The report recommends the necessity of establishing a steamship collecting service, the granting of subsidies to such steamer, the construction of cold storage warehouses, the establishment of fast trains from Port Mulgrave to Montreal, and that the government be asked to take into consideration the advisability of making some trial experiments in the direction of testing the possibility of marketing certain kinds of Canadian fresh fish in Great Britain.
